

No tours are offered on Hydra, as everything is within walking distance and with the exception of a couple of churches & museums there is no other site that actually requires guiding. The guides will simply give guests some information and walk with them around to show them the sights and point directions.

Upon arrival guests will have free time to explore this fascinating town by themselves, walk in the narrow alleys, have a drink in one of the numerous waterfront cafes, shop in the many jewellery stores, art galleries and boutiques.

Or, for the daring ones, a ride on a donkey -- one of the primary means of transportation on the island -- can be easily arranged.
